I-Introduction

Designers are mainly interested in the visual appearance and connotations of the objects, and seldom in the conceptual integrity of the design. Different sources of inspiration can be combined in one garment: a designer garment, a Roman ornament, a piece of tree bark. Even though the use of sources of inspiration is entirely pragmatic, it is possible to identify different types of sources of inspiration performing different roles. Designers find the same inspirational blend of colors, motifs shapes, and spaces in folk costume. Folk dress signifies a special day, such as Sunday, holiday, or ceremonial day. Clothing for brides and grooms are among the most elaborate. Folk dress indicates the occupation of the wearer (for example, shepherd). Folk dress distinguishes wealth and social status, typically through the number and quality of clothing items. Components of folk dress have a "magical" function. For example, the ritual marriage cap placed on a new bride brought fertility and good fortune. Folk dress signifies regional and national affiliation<sup>(1, 2, 3)</sup>

Folk(ethnic) influence Folk dress may indicate religious affiliation. Age and marital status is communicated by folk dress. Contradictory situations in peasant society, such as single motherhood, are visible in a woman's appearance. Folk dress has approved aesthetic qualities that attract available members of the opposite sex<sup>(1, 2, 3, 4, 5)</sup>

Egypt had a range of traditional costumes. The farmers (fellahin) basically wear gallibayas. In the cities the upper classes adopted the clothes of their conquerors - Ottoman Turks from 1500s, and later European from 1798. To the south the Nubians have their own distinctive costume and across the desert the Bedouin also have a separate style of clothing. The traditional clothes are differing from governorate to another in Egypt, according to its geography, weather, culture, customs, traditions, and beliefs ....etc<sup>(4, 5)</sup>

Siwa or The oasis of Siwa--the so-called Pearl of the Egyptian Desert--is located 315 (km) south of the Mediterranean port town of Marsa Matruh, Egypt, the nearest city of any size within 500 km. Known as Wahat Siwah in Arabic, the 1,000 square km Siwan Depression is 82km long, varies from 2 to 20 km wide, and lies as much as 18 meters (m) below sea level on the northern edge of the Great Sand Sea of Egypt's Western Desert--the Sahara<sup>(6,7)</sup>.

Women's traditional clothes in Siwa:

Woman's clothes and jewelries in Siwa are unique; the woman wears colorful robes with wide and long sleeves. The robe has a decorative silk piece called "Touque" around the neck and it has four thin black pieces on both sides. The old woman wears a black robe, both inside and outside the home. When the married woman goes to congratulate or console a neighbor, she wears several robes, including a black dress with long and wide sleeves; she wraps her body with a large piece of dark grey fabric striped with black and grey lines placed over the head called "mellaya".

The favorite robes for woman in Siwa are two dresses which she had made before marriage for celebrations, one of them is black and the other is white with long and wide sleeves and rich silk embroidery of variegated colors around the neck and the front part of the robe. "Sunburst" embroidery patterns picked out in silk threads with mother of pearl buttons. Siwa's well documented link with the ancient Egyptian sun god Amun-Ra may be the origin of this radiating "sunburst" design always found embroidered in multi colored silks on Siwan wedding dresses. The T-shaped black wedding dress was worn on the seventh day of the wedding. The mother of pearl buttons that cover the front panel of the dress may have a talismanic function, repelling bad luck.

Fig.(1) samples of Siwa cloth

Woman in Siwa used a shawl called "Itrqat" to cover her head at home and in celebrations. It is a rectangular piece of fabric embroidered with silk threads and it has Silk tufts too. A wedding shawl with the distinctive Siwa radiating sun design worked in multi colored silk thread. The choice of colors - predominantly red, orange and yellow -

are similarly associated with the sun. There is another style of shawl which is worn by women of the Oasis when outside their family home. It is a large rectangular piece . Girls from Siwa were expected to prepare up to seven pairs of trousers prior to their wedding .(3,8,9)

The dress or shirt in Siwa looks different in construction of the other Egyptian folk costumed. Looks like the ancient Egyptian tonic and old Coptic shirt. The embroidery focused mainly in the front it looks like rays and the embroidery geometrical and naturalistic The Siwan slacks (serwal) look wide at the upper turning wider in the bottom. The decoration focused in the focused in the bottom of legs<sup>(5)</sup>

The objective

The objective of this paper is to develop strategic thinking in designing in order to achieve viable solutions for fashion designing. .throw design different contemporary women designs inspired from the Siwan folk costumes.

II- Experimental Work.

The present research used the different silhouettes of traditional clothes from Siwa - Egypt as a source of inspiration to create fashionable designs for women. Models were drawn for the age group (25-40 years old). Models poses have been matched to the designs, which reveal the shape and style of the designs and enhance the dramatic effect desired by the designer. Ideas are sketched out in rough sketches. The sketches are then reworked and redrawn, starting with a really quick pencil drawing and then being revised and redrawn into a full-color sketch, Watercolor pencils are used to specific details and fabric renderings to designs.

III- Results and analysis.

Fashion is an immaterial concept and clothes are the materialized objects of this concept<sup>(10.)</sup> In any single culture, the definition of what constitutes an extreme fashion may be agreed upon; but extreme fashion, like beauty, is in the eye of the beholder. Particularly between Western and non-Western views there are very different ideas of what is excessive or outlandish, or verging on the unacceptable<sup>(11, 12)</sup> All affected by fashion: as individuals when using clothes and other products to create an identity and an image and as consumers participating in the wheel of consumption and economy. Although these designs not necessary are so weird or loud, some even might see simple and banal. Since fashion is a visual language that people employ to communicate with each other. Furthermore, it's about creating an identity and a space in response to the culture we inhabit.<sup>(13)</sup> It is important to remember that contemporary fashions bear obvious and subtle links to fashions throughout the ages. Contemporary styles have both diversified and limited traditional looks. Creating designs from examples in costume design history forms the harmony between fashion and costume design.
